

SeedMoney is a nonprofit helping U.S. and global food garden projects to thrive. SeedMoney offers challenge grants to food garden projects through a 30-day crowdfunding challenge running from November 15 to December 15, 2022.

Grants are open to all types of public food garden projects, including youth gardens, community gardens, food bank gardens, school gardens, etc., regardless of their location. For 2022, 370 grants ranging from $100 to $1,000 and totaling over $75,000 will be provided. The size of a grant depends on how much a project raises over the 30-day crowdfunding challenge period compared to other participating projects. The following types of grants are provided: Challenge Grants, Strong Start Grants, and Geographic Interest Grants.

Applications are due November 12, 2022, and on November 15, all funding campaigns whose applications were submitted on time and fit the criteria will go live for the crowdfunding challenge.
