Thank you for registering for our discussion on racial equity and housing justice!

Thank you for joining Ta-Nehisi Coates, National Book Award winner and distinguished writer in residence at NYU's Arthur L. Carter Journalism Institute, and NLIHC President and CEO Diane Yentel on October 6 for their conversation on racial equity and housing justice during and after COVID-19. A recording of the conversation is available for viewing until October 21 at: <https://bit.ly/34CrmDU>

In addition to sharing this resource with you, we encourage you to support NLIHC's work and mission by becoming an NLIHC member. Our members are our strength! They are essential to all our efforts to achieve a socially just public policy that ensures the lowest-income people in the U.S. have decent, accessible, and affordable homes.

NLIHC's membership is open to all individuals, organizations, resident associations, and government agencies. NLIHC members form an impressive network of committed housing and social justice advocates across the nation, and your financial contribution as an NLIHC member – at whatever level you can afford - is crucial to making our work possible.

Together, through our sustained advocacy, we can end homelessness and housing poverty in America, once and for all. Together we will achieve housing justice.
